Inspired by recent events to support working families affected by this Covid-19 virus, it is now my mission to help young children maintain healthy relationships with the natural world, despite school closures. “No school” shouldn’t mean “no going outside,” and I am here to provide a clean and healthy space for learners to continue their education.

I am most practiced with children ages 3-6, cultivating physical and social spaces for them to learn about the natural environment. The programs I run typically attract learners who are curious explorers, perhaps driven by sensory play.

Take care,
Kayla Carrington
